PRESS RELEASE

"If I die, it's okay. I will give my life for my community." Mohibullah

hūmānus and ARSPHR Launch Groundbreaking Rohingya Atrocities Archive, Continuing Mohibullah's Sacrificial Fight for Truth and Justice

LONDON, England – July 17, 2025 – hūmānus and the Arakan Rohingya Society for Peace & Human Rights \(ARSPHR\) today announced the pivotal launch of the Rohingya Atrocities Archive, a groundbreaking digital repository. This powerful, meticulously curated platform stands as a testament to ARSPHR's tireless, community-driven documentation, initially gathered on handwritten notes and often precariously stored. In 2020, hūmānus initiated a critical project to painstakingly digitalise these vital records for safekeeping and in-depth analysis, supporting ARSPHR in cleaning the data, filling information gaps, and developing robust investigation strategies.

The archive directly continues the mission of Mohibullah, the courageous Rohingya advocate who was tragically assassinated in 2021. Known in the camps simply as "Peace Father," Mohibullah famously declared, "If I die, it's okay. I will give my life for my community." This living archive embodies his unwavering commitment, detailing the profound violence, harm, and losses experienced by Rohingya families during the military operations of 2016 and 2017. It provides unprecedented access to over 3,000 cases, meticulously gathered through thousands of survivor testimonies – with information collected by name to ensure every single person who suffered is known and remembered. It serves as an unflinching testament, bringing to light the harrowing and widespread atrocities through compelling testimony and raw visual documentation, offering profound and irrefutable insight into the systematic persecution and the urgent struggle for justice and accountability, leaving no room for denial.

"The launch of the Rohingya Atrocities Archive is a monumental and urgent step in our collective fight against impunity. This archive is Mohibullah's legacy made manifest, meticulously preserving the brutal realities faced by the Rohingya people, individual by individual," said Eva Buzo, Executive Director of hūmānus. "By making this work publicly available, the community, for the first time, will see their own experience told by their own people. This is more than a database; it is a catalyst for justice, demanding action from the global community to honour Mohibullah's sacrifice and see his vision realised."

"My father dedicated his life to ensuring the world knew the truth of what happened to our people, a truth that many tried to silence," stated Hashmat Ullah, Mohibullah's son. "This archive is a powerful continuation of his bravery, fulfilling his blueprint for change: documenting the truth, speaking out peacefully, staying rooted in community, and fighting for justice even when it's dangerous. It is a beacon of hope that through this undeniable evidence, justice will one day prevail for the Rohingya."

The archive, a testament to ARSPHR's diligent, community-driven documentation, underscores the critical role of comprehensive evidence in atrocity prevention and response. It serves as a vital resource for legal proceedings, historical remembrance, and combating disinformation. Through this initiative, hūmānus proudly reinforces the global imperative to confront injustice and supports survivor-led efforts to secure tangible redress, aligning with its commitment to advancing human-centred justice and carrying forward Mohibullah's vision of a future where the Rohingya can live freely in their homeland with equal rights.
